П. макома, Ликъ 7ти, 1873.

The measure which has been introduced into the Legislative Council for the reform of the Law Courts in Hongkong, has long been needed, and will meet with the hearty approval of the Community. The laws in Hougkong, and the constitution of the Courts, have come upon us, as it were, rather by accident than design. Going upon the English matinet not to alter what has worked reasonably well, the Colony took over not only the laws of England, but also the heavy technical procedure of the English Law Courts; and we have thus had a system which it has become year by year more manifest is not suited by any means to the requirements of the 30th June, 1873: Colony.

measure-which, however, we trust to do before it is finally passed-we may state generaily that its main object is to simplify proce- on it at low water spring tides, and 7 fathous dure in every possible direction. It is very close to. There are 10 fathous all round the undesirable in a small place like Hougkong, that legal proceedings should be in any way overburdened with technicalities. Of late years, even at home, there has been a very 53 W. 7 cables; Tathong rock, N. 15 W. 1; strong feeling against many time-honoured cables; S.E. extreme of Tung-lung, N. 36 E." formalities, and, as-the ATTORNEY-GENERAL pointed out at the Council, an attempt is mended by the Harbour-Master to-keep in the being made to codify the existing laws. This, centre of that channel; and, if intending to * however, must be a work of much time, if, indeed, with the great difficulties that must be met, it can be accomplished at all. In the meantime, there is no reason why, by a well considered code of procedure, we should not facilitate matters out here, and this end will in a great degree be attained by the code now introduced.

The chief change which will take place in the constitution of the Course is that the Summary Jurisdiction Court will be abolished, and a puisue judge be appointed to the Supreme Court, part of whose duties it will be to hear the cases now determined in the Summary Court. This change is very desirable. The Summary Court is in the main an anomalous institution. It is too large an -institution for determining the petty suits effected; but perhaps even it would be gone, and the defendant was in attendance at on for discussion to-day, the Extreme Left will . But another, and a much more agreeable desirable to make arrangements that petty the supper table in a state of intoxication, unite with the Ministry against its demand for phase, was climinated from the Vienna Excases, say under $50, should, when necessary, the table to keep bimself from falling. The though the supporters of the Interpellation owing no doubt to the lateness of the winter, be heard either by the CLERK OF THE COURT OF defendant was ordered from the table, and told may perhaps muster 350, the Government and and even now there is a sad deficiency in most by the REGISTEAR—with, of course, an appeal to higher authorities should either party desire it. A large number of the Summary and a lock broken. He had no proof that de Constitution, the Extreme Left will join the carried all before them. Moreover, the Prince cases are of so trivial a character that it is unreasonable for the valuable time of a judge to be wasted over them-and in nine cases out of ten they do not involve any fine questions of law, and can be determined -perhaps best-on grounds of common sense and equity. If such a plan as is above suggested were adopted, it would be the means of saving a great deal of time, and facilitating matters considerably. It would be easy for the officer of the Court who was deputed to hear such cases, to reserve decision in any · case where a legal point of importance arose, until he had had an opportunity of consulting the CHIEF-JUSTICE. By this plan the public would, in fact, have the advantage of the best legal talent in the Colony, even about small matters, and the time of the

The arrangements for rehearing of cases before the two judges, preliminary to appeal home, will no doubt prove a very great advantage. As the Hon. Mr. PAUNCEFOTE pointed out, it will be some kind of test to enable suitors to ascertain what will the chances of success in carrying the case further, as, of course, where there is a concurrence of opinion between the two judges, the chances of succeeding in an appeal are obviously small. Another great boon which will be derived from the present measure, is that in future the public will know exactly where to look for all information concerning the procedure of the Court. Hitherto, nothing has been more puzzling-at times even to professional men-than to pick out from a mass of Ordinances all the details as to procedure apcode is passed, we shall know where to the 14th April. look for the whole. We would suggost, that if at a future date any additions or alterations be found necessary, they be made in the form of additional sections to tion, in place of as separate measures, and that from time to time a notification be having before him the consecutive sections i up to the last number notified.

One other reform connected with legal matters is most urgently wanted. The Orthe volume (with the supplementary volume afterwards published) only comes down to 1867. It would be highly desirable that the vorment Civil Hospital, where he arranged his Carlist war is a singular spectacle; but it is Takow, Orders for Copies may be sent to the Daily whole of the Ordinances should be published in one volume, with a complete index; and it and enpping, with numerous other articles. might be enacted that this will be done The second defendant, a consumptive patient, again every five years. Mr. Mind's annual motion regarding the disestablishment of the churches of Eng land and Scotland, was rejected by an increased majority-in fact, the impatience of the House was too great to allow the debate to be proceeded with. out the House, the discussion was continued Sir H. Verney, who expressed his belief that the statements of the hop, member for Graves. end in respect to the Chinese coolie traffic were not at all exaggerated-a traffic more cruel than any carried on in slaves from the coast of Africa. These Chinese coolies were a civilized and intelligent race. They were much more sensitive than the poor negroes deported from Africa, and there was no doubt they were deceived and entrapped into these contracts. He hoped that much more stringent representations than had yet been made to the Portuguese Government would be addressed to them by Lord Granville on that subject

Mr. Eastwick thought the Chinese Government had shown that they were not indifferent in regard to that matter by having expressed to Mr. Wade their thanks for the course taken by Mr. Watson in Japan with reference to the coolie traffic. The report of the Commissioners sent to British Quiana stating that the plant ers, having made a dear bargain with regard to Chinese immigrants; had tried to extricate themselves in not the most creditable manner showed that even in our own colonies, with all the care displayed by the Government, questionable proceedings occurred, and that nuremitting vigilance was necessary. As to Spain and Portugal, the latter an old ally, and with whom any hostile feeling was undesirable, their conduct was reprehensible in the highest degree. The noble lord very properly used the diplomatic expressions of courtesy which must be used by those employed in a responsible position towards foreign powers, but he, as an independent member, could imagine nothing worse than their conduct. Porto Rico, indeed, was a remarkable exception to the other Spanish colonies, for there slavery had been abolished, an unanimous feeling prevailed against immigration, the existing population was quite equal to the demands of labour, large quantities of sugar and tobacco were produced, and there was a surplus revenue, which, he was sorry to say, was taken by Spain to carry on the war in Cuba. In the latter island the Governor and planters, according to the report of a conference reprinted in an official document of the United States, regarded the Chinese coolie traffic as absolutely necessary, and requiring to be continued and increased. He agreed with the right hon. member for Shoreham that Lord Granville's despatch to Mr. Layard appeared to encourage the ideas of importing coolies from British India, but in another despatch Lord Granville referred to the scheme as impracticable. Possibly one despatch was meant to be shown to the Spanish Government, and the other not. It was difficult to know what to do with Governments with which we wished to remain on good terms, and which yet were determined to carry on this traffic. W might, as indicated by the noble Lord, act in concert with the United States, which had shown a willingness to do anything they could to put down the nefarious practise. Influence might also be brought to bear on the Chinese Government at Pekin. The warmth shown by tue hon, baronet (Sir C. Wingfield) in such a matter was only natural, and he hoped the Government would continue their efforts.

Sir G. Balfour was satisfied with the reply given by the noble lord; and begged the Go vernment not to slacken their efforts in this matter. Having considerable acquaintance with Macao, he was afraid he could not hold out any hopes that the Government would be able, with entire success, to put an end to the kidnapping; but he suggested that the most effectual mode of putting a stop to it would be to encourage the free emigration of coolies to our Colonies, whereby both parties would be benefited by cheapening, as far as possible, the cost of their conveyance. When once the coolies were landed in large numbers in the Colonies, they were quite able to take care of, and to provide for, themselves. (Hear.)

IMPERIAL QUARTO. ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY WITH THE

PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Angle-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

OR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All tac new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objeots in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are bere given in ordenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Chalmers' Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medburst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. THE NEGLECTED CANARY. BY ROBERT LEIGHTON! Overhead in the lattice high " Our little golden songster hung, Singing, piping werrily, With dulect throat and clipping tongue . Singlug-from the peep of morning •To the evening's closing eye, When the sun in blue was burning, Or when clouds abut out the sky · Foul or fair, morn, eve, or noon. "Ita little pipe was still in tune. That gave sweet echo to its note. Its very limbs were warbling strings;

Its breast was fill'd with fairy shells And strings of tiny silver bells Rang with the pulsings of its throat; Song all through its restless frame, .1 well believe that music came M'en from the tippings of its wings; Piping early, late and long, Mad with joy and drunk with song O, welcome to thy little store, Thy song repays it o'er and o'er. But playful June brought holidays,

And hade our city hearts prepare To leave awhile our braten ways For sandy shore and breezy air. Some busy days the needles flew. And, though no special heed it drew, Our warbler up above us there .. Was each oness joy-but no one's care. The noise of preparation rang . From room to room, from head to head, Until our little minstrel sang Almost unbecded, and-unfed; Singing on with trustful lay, Piping through the livelong day, But how it spared its abbing well,

Or how eke out, its lessening meal, We may but guess, we cannot well-We only think, and sadly feel. It saw the kittons on the floor Regaled with plenty from our board; it saw the crumbs swept from our door, Feeding the sparrows in the yard. All were those prison wires away. And were it only free as they! We know not if its song grew work

As thirst and banger gnaw'd apace; And when to the accustom'd place, It came its food and drink to seek. We cannot tell if bleak despair Rose in its breast when none was there! Or whether apringing to its nerch. Is piped again the merry strain, Alighting to ronew its sourch-" Search and sing again, again, We cannot tell, our busy brains Unconsciously drank in its straius; Nor miss'd at morning, noon, or night, The sweet unrecognised delight.

But when the day to leave came round, "Ab, who will tend the bird?" we said. 'Chirp, chirp sweet, sweet. Alas no sound Of wing or note! And is it fled?" Wallook'd into the enge and found Our little minstrel cold and dead And scattered on its little floor The chaffy remnants of its store; The last drop in its well was drain'd, And not a grain of seed remained.

We haid it in a little grave, And wondered how so small a thing Had ever piped the merry stave That made our hearts and household ring. Sarcly it was not this that sang, But something that his pass'd away-The life that rang thre' limb and tongue-Ay, call it spirit if we may; Which hiply in some other sphere Repeats the song that charm'd as here. For life is sacred—great and small— And he that notes the sparrow's fall May keep a higher lious for all.

AMUSING BREVITY Some epistolary crackers are very amusing. Lord Borkeley, wishing to apprise the Duke of Dorset of his changed condition, wrote: "Dear Dorset,-I have just been married, and am the happiest dog alive. Berkeley with: "Dear Berkeley,-Every dog bas his formation as to the source of a river, sent in Goods stored therein. the following note to a village postmaster: "Sir,-This department wishes to know how. far the Tombigbes river runs up?-Respectfully yours, &c." By return bigil came: "Sir,-The Tombigbee does not run up atwill turn over the funds, &c., pertaining to Current Rates. your office, to your successor." Not at all disturbed by his summary dismissal, the postmaster replied: "Sir, -The revenues for this office for the quarter ending September 30, have been minety-five cents; its expenditure, same period, for tallow candles and twine, 1.05 dollars. I trust my successer is instructed to abjust the balance.' His superior officer was probably as much disgusted with his precise correspondent as the American editor who, writing to a Coumeeticut brother: "Send full particulars of the flood "-incuming an inundation at that place-received for reply: "You will find. them in Gonesis" A good specimen of Thing, and Australia Yankee brevity is the order received by a commissariat officer named Brown from a Colonel Boyd, which could scarcely have been couched in fewer words than: "Brown supplies with a note running: "Boydwef-Brown."-Chambers' Journal

WAR THE NORMAL CONDITION IN THE WORLD.

A fancy has come over us during the last | [NROW and after this date the following rates blessed forty years of unexampled peace from which our ancestors of the sixteenth century were kept, by stern and yet most wholesome lessons; the fancy that peace, and not war, is the normal condition of the world. The fancy is so fair that we blame none who wherish it; after all, they do good by cherishing it; they point us to an ideal which we should otherwise forget, as Babylon, Rome. France in the seventeenth century. forgot utterly. Only they are in haste-and pardonable haste, too -- to realise that ideal, forgetting that to do so would be really to stop short of it, and to rest contented in some form of human society for lower than that which God has actually prepared for surers. those who love Him. Better to believe that all our conceptions of flio beight to which the human race might attain, are poor and paltry compared with that toward which God is guiding it, and for which he is disciplining it by awful lessons; and to fight on, if need be, ruthless, and yet full of pity -and many a noble, soul has learnt within - the last two years [1855-6] how easy it is to reconcile in practice that seeming paradox of words-smiting down stoutly evil wheresoever we shall find it, and saying, "What ought to be, we know not; God alone can know: but that this ought not to be, we do know, and here, in God's name, it shall not stay." We repeat it: war, in some shape or other, is the normal condition of the world. It is a fearful fact; but we shall not abolish it by ignoring it, and ignoring by the same method the teaching of our Bibles. Not in mere metaphor does the gospel of love describe the life of the individual good man as perpetual warfare. Not in mere metaphor does the apostle of love see in his visions of the world's future no Arcadian shepherd paradises, not even a perfect civilisation, but an eternal war in heaven, wrath and woe, plague and carthquake; and amid the everhasting storm, the voices of the saints beneath the alter, crying, "Lord how long?" Shall we pretend to have more tender hearts than the old man of Ephesus, whose dying sermon, so old logends say, was nought but -- Little children, love one another ; and who yet could denounce the liar and the hater and the covetous man, and proclaim the vengeance of God against all evil-doers, with all the fierceuess of an Isaiah ?- From " Plays and Puritane," by the E.v. C. Kings-

AN ENERGETIC JOURNALIST. The late Mr. Walter, even when M.P. for Berkshire and Nottingham, never forgot Printing-house-square when the debate, however late, had closed. One afternoon, says Mr. Grant, he came to the office and found the compositors gone to dinner. Just at that moment a parcel murked "Immediate and important" arrived. It was news of vast importance. Ho at once slipped off his coat, and set up the news with his own hands; a pressman was at his post, and by the time the men returned a second edition was actually printed and published. But his foresight and energy was most conspicuously shown in 1845, when the jealousy of the French Government had thrown obstacles in stored thereon. the way of the Times' couriers, who brought their Indian dispatches from Marseilles. What were seas and deserts to Walter? He at once took council with Lieutenant Waghorn, who had opened up the overland route to India, and proposed to try a new route by Trieste. The result was that Waghorn reached London two days before the regularmail—the usual mail aided by the French Government. The Morning Herald was at first forty-eight hours before the Times, but after that the Times got a fortnight ahead and although the Trieste route was abandoned, the Times, eventually, was left alone as a troublesome and invincible adversary-Old and New London, by Walter Thornbury.

LORD BYRON'S DAUGHTER. Excepting Mrs. Somerville, no woman of this century has ever exhibited as remarkable mathematical nowers as Lady Lovelace. some curious psychological perversion, talents, no wise inferior to her father's, were entirely destitute of the poetic clement. Her personal appearance, however, resembled the THE OOSTERLING SEA AND FIRE IN Byron's. The writer saw her at Clifton, the year before she was married. She was with her mother, Lady Noel Byron. The head, face, lineamonts, skin, wavy hair, and large liquid eyes of her father were all reproduced in the daughter. Unfortunately her charactor, also, was like his. There was a craving for excitement that made her forever restless. Though married to a man whom she deservedly loved and respected-surrounded by all the elegancies of the most cultivated English life-a leader in society, whether at their handsome mansion in St. James'-square, during the London season, or in the pulatial country-seat at Ashley-Combe -possessed of wealth, blest with children, the idul of her husband and the admiration of all scientific men-she could not be contunt. Between Lady Byron and herself there. was almost perpetual discord. She speculated in the funds, gambled at Baden-Baden, kept her betting-book for the races, and finally. during the railway mania, when George Hudson was "king," bought and sold to an extravagant degree in the thousand-and-one enterprises of the day. With her ample income she might have done all this and escaped unharmed. But her agent failed bankruptcy courts took possession of his accounts-and to save public scandal, Lord Lovelace came forward, and, at an enormous sacrifice, made good a deficiency. Her chagrin at this, it was always believed, was at the bottom of a long illness that followed which terminated fatally.—Lakeside Monthly
